

ABSTRACT

The purpose of this work is to demonstrate the possibility of solving the economic and social international problems, as described in articles 1 and 55 of the United Nations Charter, by the means offered by the economic proposal of the Economy of Communion. Therefore, it is necessary to analyze all the relevant aspects of this new proposal, such as: its history, its importance, the free sharing of the businesses' profit, the participation of the poor in the project, the "culture of giving" and the practical experiences. Furthermore, this research presents the history, structure and purposes of the United Nations ('UN'). Also, it shows the relationship between the members of the Economy of Communion project and the United Nations' representatives, through New Humanity – a non-governmental organization with consultative status in UN's Economic and Social Council. In conclusion, it emphasizes the necessity of continuing the UN and New Humanity's job of spreading and convincing a greater number of people and companies, from the public and private sectors, all over the world, about the importance of Economy of Communion to the solution of the economic and social international problems.
